Main goal of this project is raising awareness about the issue of discrimination and the importance of combating our own prejudice in order to avoid labelling people based on groundless impressions we have of others.  The key component of the training will be the use of drama in education meaning that the issues of stereotypes and causes of discrimination will be dealt with through diverse theatre activities. In addition, participants will have a chance to meet and work with other cultures and to exchange experiences about the problem caused by stereotypes and prejudice and about the ways of overcoming it. At the end of the training the participants shall do a theatre performance which will focus on raising awareness of the local public about the problem of “labelling people” in societies throughout Europe. Working together on combating the issues of stereotypes and discrimination the participants will learn to understand that in the end we should all be equal despite our differences and that we all have the responsibility of building an open-minded and non-discriminating Europe as European citizenship is not bounded by the borders of the European Union.

Young people have a key role to play in the future of this world, not only because they are the adults and leaders of tomorrow, but also because they have the possibility to think "out of the box"; to invent new solutions. Every young person can play a role in global development, and we want to encourage actions at grass roots levels in order to develop a global conscience of environmental protection amongst European youth. Therefore we (JUMP organization, hosting organization) will organise an 8 day Youth Exchange in Serbia (venue: hotel on mountain Divcibare) that will gather 25 young people from 5 European countries Spain, Czech Republic, FYR Macedonia, Croatia and Serbia) to discuss ways of bringing global environmental issues into youth work. The event will focus on possibilities for young people to design their own environments that will reduce society's reliance on industrial systems of production and distribution that are fundamentally and systematically destroying the Earth's ecosystems. The main focus of the event will be Eco-villages as a tool for creating a social environment in a low-impact lifestyle. This Youth Exchange will provide the participants with a first-hand experience as they will have a chance to visit an eco-village. This way we aim to bring together the theoretical sessions with the practical experience of living in an eco-village.
